

The Problems of the System

The Global Connection. Isaac's perspectiveWhen schools ignore students who are struggling with their mental health, they aren't providing the 'healthy lives' that this UN goal promises. This can be a huge problem. We will discuss this more in the next section, 'Human Impact'.

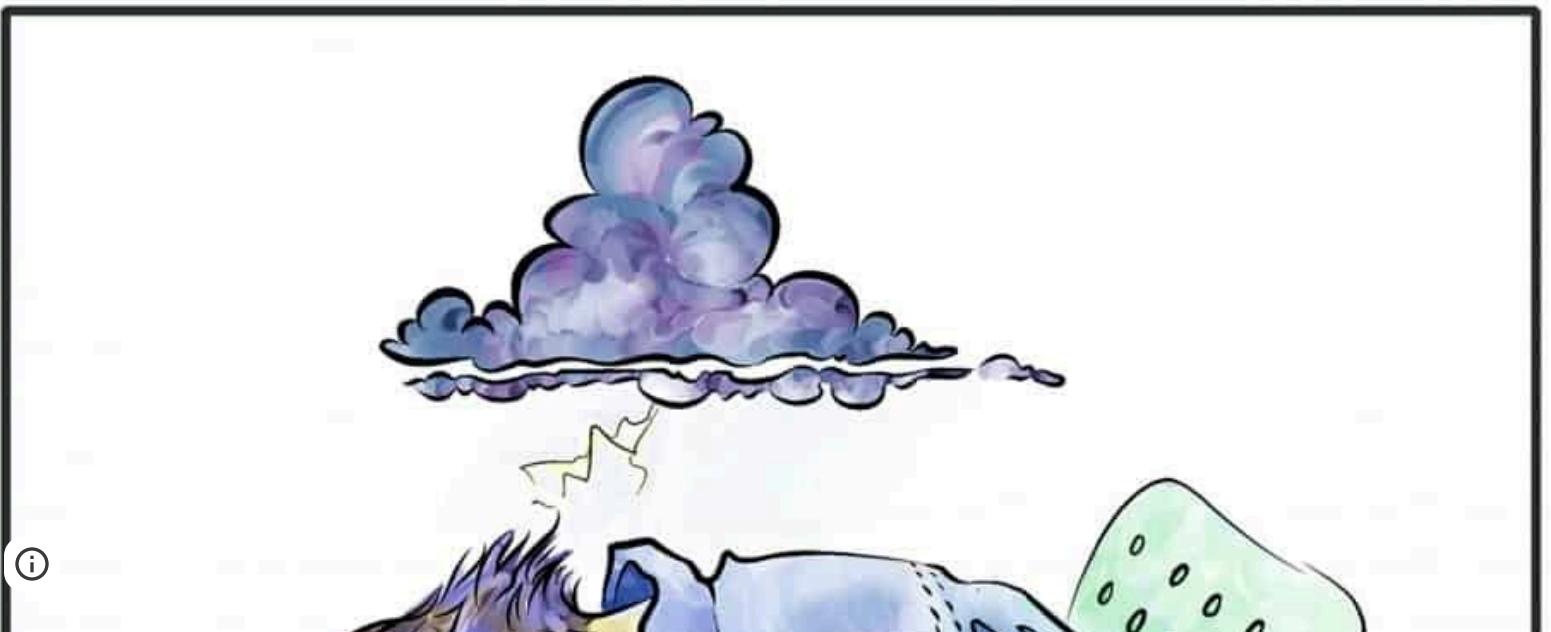

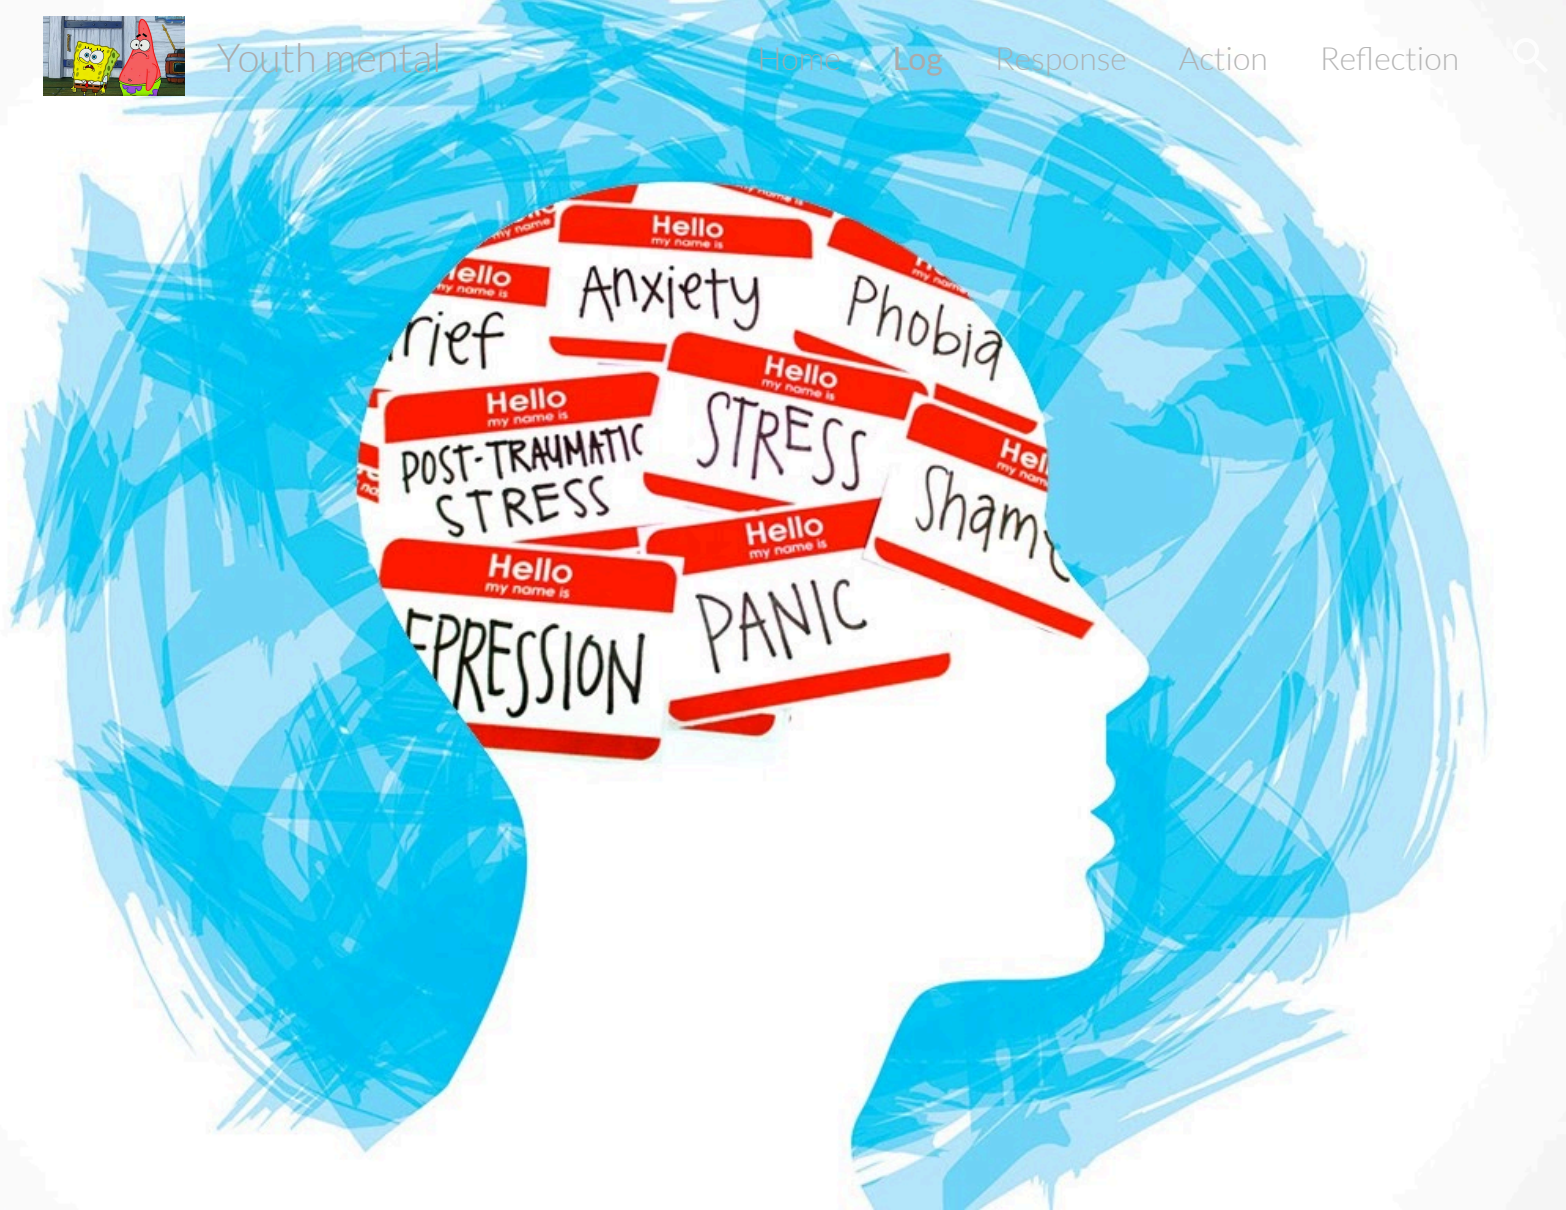

Human Impact. Isaacs perspective: When a student is experiencing a panic attack or extreme stress during a math lesson, being told to 'wait until lunch' can make them feel invisible and unsupported. The 'Lived Experience' here is the gap between needing help and actually being allowed to receive it without academic penalty. People don't all have the same methods for handling stress, and if they don't receive immediate support, they often cannot understand the material or cope with the situation.

Futu t. Leos perspective: Say around 20 years from now some things can get "better" and "worse" because alot o obaly wont take the jobs 20 years from now even with more funding so that means less people are have experince in these jobs and overall it will be worse.
