

How Nova Stoica responds to this

Purpose

Leo's perspective: The government has funded to get this more into people from ages 12-25 on June 15 2023 for better mental health for youth which they made a counselling center to help people to with mental health problems mostly with teens because teens mostly have mental health problems around the ages 13-15 but this is also to help some adults.

Nova Scotia is investing $3.2 million to provide young Nova Scotians and their families easier access to mental health and addictions support.

- mental health and substance use supports
- primary health care
- education, employment and training supports
- peer supports for youth and families
- social and community services
- other services based on local needs and priorities.

How i think this is working is that its a work in progress since it takes a while for these things to happen so its probaly still in deovelpment since i also haven't seen much talk about this 3.2 million investment
